HARD TWIST

WESTERN RANCH WOMEN

PHOTOGRAPHS BY BARBARA VAN CLEVE

Barbara Van Cleve is nationally known for her photographs of western landscapes, ranchers, cowboys, and cattle women. Her heritage is rich with firsthand experience of the cowgirl life. She grew up on her family's ranch, the Lazy K Bar, founded in 1880 in the Crazy Mountains of Montana. Her first camera was a "Brownie Box," given to her at age 11 along with a developing kit, and her childhood was spent working and experiencing life on the ranch in the American West and cultivating her interest in photography. Van Cleve taught English Literature and Photography at DePaul University in Chicago, and then became the youngest Dean of Women in the United States. She retired from academia in 1980 to pursue photography full time and had her first major exhibition in the fall of 1985. Her work is in public and private collections in the United States as well as internationally.

Hard Twist documents the lives of ranch women from the northern Rockies to the Mexican border. The work has been described as a celebration of women of the range along with their ranches and the breathtaking landscapes in which they live. The photographs evoke the women's physical prowess, commitment to family, hard work, emotional maturity, and always a sense of humor. The work challenges the idea of the cowboy as the predominant figure in the West. Van Cleve spent much of 1986-1994 traveling the Rocky Mountain West on horseback gathering images and interviews from women of the West in their natural elements – out on the range, ranch, or at rodeos. From her travels, she created the book titled Hard Twist: Western Ranch Women in 1995, from which the exhibition was created. The term "Hard Twist" refers to the old Manila hemp lariat rope that is tightly twisted. Van Cleve recognized that the term can also refer to a small, compact, physically strong person that rarely breaks – much like women of the West.
